Hō-on-kō 報恩講

EVERY YEAR, we observe a very important service called Hō-on-kō. Let's learn a little about it.

What does Hō-on-kō mean?

The formal name of this service is Goshōki Hō-on-kō, which means "a gathering to repay our debt of gratitude to Shinran Shōnin, the Founder of Jōdo Shinshū, on the anniversary of his death." In Asia the tradition is to give more emphasis to a person's death-date than her/his birth-date. Hō-on-kō also gives us an opportunity to learn from Shinran's life and teaching.

When did Hō-on-kō begin?

Shinran Shōnin passed away on the 28th day of the 11th month of the year 1262. Shortly thereafter, his immediate disciples began to hold monthly memorial services for him. Kakunyo Shōnin later made the service in memory of the Founder an annual observance.

When it is observed?

Most temples of the Hongwanji-ha (Nishi Hongwanji) branch of Jōdo Shinshū observe Hō-on-kō on January 16. Temples of the Ōtani -ha (Higashi Hongwanji) branch do so on November 28.

November 28 is the date of Shinran's death according to the lunar calendar, while January 16 is the date based on western calendars. Nishi Hongwanji officially adopted the January 16 date in 1872, but many BCA temples—including the Berkeley Buddhist Temple—continue to observe Hō-on-kō in November.

Where did Shinran Shōnin pass away?

Shinran died in the city of Kyoto, at the age of 90 years. When he was 35, Shinran had been exiled to the northern region of Echigo. There he married Eshinni, with whom he had a number of children. At the age of 42 he moved to the Kanto area with his family in order to propagate the nembutsu teaching. Then, when he was 62, he and his family moved to Kyoto, so that Shinran could complete his magnum opus, the Kyōgyōshinshō.

21 years later, Eshinni and three children returned to Echigo to oversee her family's lands. They were never to see Shinran again. During the next 6 years he maintained a humble life in Kyoto as a guest in various temples. Shinran died quietly at Zenbōji temple, with his eldest daughter, Kakushinni, by his side.

Where are his ashes interred?

Shinran's body was cremated and his ashes were interred in a simple shrine at a place called Ōtani, outside of Kyoto. His daughter Kakushinni served as the guardian of his remains. This was to be the beginning of the Hongwanji organization, which has continued to grow as the mantle of leader has been passed on through Shinran's descendants for over seven hundred years. Currently, Shinran Shōnin's remains are interred at the Ōtani Mausoleum in eastern Kyoto.

Hō-on-kō, of course, is much more than just a collection of a few historical facts. I hope, however, that these facts will help us to develop a greater appreciation for this event. I also hope that everyone will attend our Hō-on-kō Service on November 18 so that we all may come to understand the meaning and importance of Shinran Shōnin's teachings in our lives today.

PRESIDENTS' MESSAGE

Although we are certainly now well into autumn, it certainly does not feel that way at times. As I write this in mid-October, the forecast for the next week seems more like a continuation of Indian summer than it does the beginning of our rainy season.

Whatever the weather may be like in the upcoming weeks, we know some things will definitely be on the horizon this month. With the variety of holidays in November and December and the general election this year, the next two months looks to be eventful at the very least. This is definitely the time of year in which there are many demands for our time and attention.

Moreover, as a part of the general election it is natural to feel some level of apprehension about the election and its potential outcomes. As our political system in recent years has become more polarized, the choices we make from simple local ordinances to state referendums and the presidential election, do appear to be between two very different potential directions for our society.

As such, should you find yourself discombobulated, dismayed, or even elated by this time of year or by outcomes from our election or even the entire process, might we recommend a stop at our temple on a Sunday? As Buddhists, we know that change is inevitable and constant but it is often not easy to deal with. From personal experience we can both attest to the ability of a simple Dharma Family Service to put it into perspective and, at the very least, give us an excuse to catch our proverbial spiritual breath.

Elect to Gassho,

Art Nishimura and Willie Fernandez
BBT Co-presidents

Ruthless Compassion: The Dentist

by Diane Ames

“Alas,” said the dentist, “I’m afraid your gums show signs of infection about here. That’s not surprising; gum infections tend to accompany old age and are a precursor of death. Does it hurt when I poke it? I gather from your shrieks that it does. My assistant will show you how to clean and disinfect it every night for a while. It will hurt and bleed at first, but genuine compassion on yourself and your dental future requires it. At your next visit we’ll see whether that takes care of it or we have to do something more drastic. And speaking of your next visit, you had better schedule one next week. The filling that I did fifteen years ago to replace the forty-year-old filling that fell out of this tooth has itself succumbed to impermanence and cracked.”

“So I’ll need yet another filling?”

“I’m afraid not. It was a small tooth to begin with, and decades of decay and dentistry have largely rotted and drilled it away. You’ll need another dental crown.”

I gulped. “Is that all?”

“Well, no. There’s a reason for the toothache that brought you here in the first place. The x-rays show that the root canal that you got in 1998 has, well, let’s say, failed.”

“How could an old root canal fail? After fourteen years?”

“Who knows? But I’ve often seen that the tooth it saved may seem healthy one week, and in the next week infection returns. With it come decay and death—of the tooth, if you don’t get another root canal. So I’ll have my assistant prepare your nitrous oxide gas, your novocaine, and your ojuzu beads.”

Buddhist teachers sometimes speak of ruthless compassion, the idea that doing the compassionate thing sometimes involves inflicting temporary emotional or physical pain. Of course we often see some such concept (“this is for your own good”) invoked to rationalize abuse or as a cloak for self-deception about one’s real motives. Nonetheless ruthless compassion is sometimes necessary, as exemplified by the dentist who must perform occasional root canals to keep my teeth from proving more impermanent than the rest of me. Of course being a dentist requires years of training as well as a commitment to saving teeth. Likewise the exercise of ruthless compassion requires knowing what you’re doing, and above all, being sure of your own motives. And since that is difficult, it should be exercised only sparingly and reluctantly.

Dear Members and Friends of the Temple,

The Fall season is upon us and we hope you are enjoying the brisk weather and changing leaves.

On November 18, 2012 the Berkeley Buddhist Temple will be observing HO-ON-KO (Feast of Thanksgiving and Gratitude) commemorating the attainment of Nirvana by Shinran Shonin who handed down to us the teachings of the Buddha.

For this year's service we are fortunate to have as guest speaker, Rev. George Shibata, retired minister from Reedley Buddhist Temple, now living in Stockton.

We hope you will attend the HO-ON-KO family service on November 18, 2012 at 9:30 AM. The Berkeley Buddhist Women's Association will be having a Sushi and Crafts Sale fundraiser as well. Please support them in raising funds for their 100th Anniversary celebration in 2014.

The Temple would appreciate your special donation for HO-ON-KO. An envelope is attached for your convenience.

J-Sei DayTrip to San Jose...

JapanTown, San Jose Friday, November 2, 2012

For our final daytrip this year we will travel to San Jose. The Japanese American Museum of San Jose along with guest curators Connie Young Yu and Leslie Masunaga will feature a special exhibit, "Common Ground: Chinatown and Japantown, San Jose," focusing on the story of Heinlerville, San Jose's last Chinatown. The exhibit will tell the personal story behind Heinlerville's residents and chronicle that community's relationship to and influence on today's Japantown.

It will feature artifacts from a 2008 Sonoma State University archaeological excavation of the Heinlerville site. Personal mementos and a video that incorporates interviews and photos from that time period will be available for viewing.

Lunch on-your-own and shopping will follow. After lunch and before we head home, we are arranging a docent led tour of the murals that have recently been added to the Japantown landscape created by local artists.

Please wear comfortable walking shoes and dress for the weather. Please bring water to stay hydrated.

Our sessions focus on ways in which Buddhist teaching and practice can impact our everyday lives. Each session will take up a different topic and so you are welcome to attend any or all sessions.

All interested persons are welcome to attend. Please invite your friends! We hope to see you!
